

What's causing your container to fill up with stress?

Developed from an idea by Brabban and Turkington (2002)

What stresses/worries can you do something about?

What can't you change and need to accept?

What needs your urgent attention?

Can anyone help you with anything in your container?

What are some of the unhelpful responses you have to stress?

What are some of the useful ways that you release/use stress (turn the tap)?

How can you tell that your stress container is getting too full/ overflowing (What's your stress signature)?

How can you increase the size of your container?

Challenging Negative Thinking/ Self-talk

Self-talk often feels like it's a fact, when it's often simply a biased opinion or just one way of thinking about a situation.

Our thoughts about a situation can cause or elongate distress and can have a negative impact on our mood and behaviour.

If you're experiencing negative thoughts, chances are your self-talk is stuck on a downward slope. The more we practice this way of thinking, the better we get at it.

Learning to challenge this growing habit might take time and practice, but it's worth the effort.

The first step is to notice the negative thought and simply question it.

The method of "Turning Down the HEAT" on negative thinking contains tips on how to analyse and challenge these thoughts and start replacing the negativity with balance and perhaps even positivity.

Practicing this can have a profound impact on our resilience and wellbeing.

TURN DOWN THE

HELPFULNESS Is this thought helpful to me?
Is it going to help me achieve my goals?

EVIDENCE Am I confusing a fact with an opinion?
What is the evidence for the negative thought?
What is the evidence against the negative thought?

ALTERNATIVE PERSPECTIVES If a good friend knew I were having this thought, what would they say to me?
If someone I loved had this thought, what would I tell them?
Five years from now, if I look back on this situation, will I look at it any differently?

THINKING BIASES Am I catastrophising?
Am I thinking in all-or-nothing terms?
Am I focussing solely on the negatives?

ON NEGATIVE THINKING

My Action Plan

RED - what will I stop doing that's not helpful,

AMBER - what will I keep doing that is helpful,

GREEN - what will I start doing that's helpful
